Storytelling helps us to be open-minded because it helps us understand the experiences of others.

Storytelling develops curiosity because we all want to know what happens next in a good story.

Storytelling is a creative activity that connects us with the people around us and with our past, present and our future.

Through storytelling we can imagine what things were like in the past, create fictional worlds and invent things that do not exist yet.

Storytelling can help us to see things from a different perspective and approach problems differently.

We all need creativity skills. We can all be creative.
