Introduction

Education Scotland takes its commitment to the duties required by the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman (SPSO) very seriously. We are committed to providing high quality service and value complaints as an opportunity to improve those services.

The Scottish Public Services Ombudsman sets out a standardised set of complaints performance indicators which Education Scotland are required to use to understand and report on performance in line with the Model Complaints Handling Procedure (MCHP). The consistent application and reporting of performance against these indicators is also used to compare, contrast and benchmark complaints handling with other organisations, and in doing so will drive shared learning and improvements in standards of complaints handling performance. The complaints key performance indicators (KPIs) used in this report apply to all organisations that have a statutory duty to comply with the MCHP.

This year's Complaints Annual Performance report presents information about the way Education Scotland has managed its complaints between 1 April 2024 and 31 March 2025.

Learning from complaints

Education Scotland use complaints to inform improvements in our service delivery. Our report outlines learning and actions we have taken in response to the upheld and partially upheld complaints.

Business improvement within the business area and across the organisation has been improved by undertaking:

- Feedback from all complaints used as part of the continuous training of HMI.
- All members of inspection and review teams are fully trained in the PRAISE Framework and expected to apply this to their work.
- Reviewed processes for safeguarding, sharing intelligence/information protocols and training for all staff who may be on the front line for receiving a safeguarding call or email to keep up to date with staffing changes.
